Musings

The second reading today speaks of Christ as our peace, destroying the dividing walls of hostility between people through his death on the cross. It is ironic, of course, that the very city in which Christ was crucified has become synonymous with walls of hostility between peoples - as have cities such as Berlin and Belfast in the past. But in our daily lives most of those walls are not made of bricks, or indeed steel. They are usually made up of unkind words squirreled away and retained for future airing; old grievances nursed and fed; slights unforgiven and allowed to fester. Where is Christ in these for us today?

Pope@pontifex When everything falls apart, only one thing sustains our hope: God loves us, he loves everyone!
